

12 Lit & Comp Literary Analysis Research Paper Major Reference Sources

Gale - Many series of these books, produced by Gale. A cumulative index is found in volumes for some sets (the newer the volume the more complete the index); for others the index is a separate volume. We do not have all the books produced by Gale (they publish more every year), but Troy Public Library subscribes to Literature Resource Center, an online database, which makes available most of the material found in the book sets.

We have sets for contemporary authors (CLC, CA, CANR) including authors who were living on or after 1960; twentieth century authors (TCLC) including authors of the 20th century who died prior to 1960; nineteenth century authors (NCLC); ancient writers (LC 1400-1800); Black American authors (BLC); short stories (SSC); drama (DC); poetry (PC). These sets all contain critical writings excerpted from essays, articles and letters.

Harold Bloom books - Many authors covered. He has books that cover novels, characters, and authors. Also Bloom's notes. To locate these books, use the automated catalog and look up either your author or book title as a subject browse.

Novels for Students - {Ref 808 NOV}- Analysis, context and criticism on commonly studied novels. Each novel entry includes a "What Do I Read Next" section that offers suggestions for novels that have something in common with the chosen literary work (same author, similar theme, plot, setting, etc.). Entries for each novel included in this book also list themes for the novel. Available online (choose Gale, then Literature resource Center) but not full text~in most cases the books will have more material!

OF COURSE there are other sources available, so if you are not finding enough information for your research, please let me know and I will help you find what you need.

Online Resources

Link to these from the Media Center homepage (choose “class assignments”) and then find 12 CP Banned Books. (www.troycolts.org/mediacenter)

A great online resource is found in the EBSCO database. After clicking on EBSCO, choose Literary Reference Center. Here you will find the “Masterplots” series of books, book reviews, and reference sources for, among other literary elements, literary characters. Novelist may also be helpful~ this database lets you enter the title of a book you’ve enjoyed, and then you can choose the option of finding other books like that book. User Id is troyhs and password is library.

Our e-books are located within the Gale database Gale Virtual Reference Library. Current titles available include: Concise Major 21st Century Writers , Gale Contextual Encyclopedia of World Literature , Literary Newsmakers for Students , Literary Themes for Students: Race and Prejudice , Literary Themes for Students: The American Dream, Literary Themes for Students: War and Peace, Nonfiction Classics for Students, Novels for Students , and Poetry for Students.

~Username and Password are the same: TROY83846 .

More e-books are available from Infobase Publishing. Username: ths Password: books. Currently we only have the following Harold Bloom titles available: Gabriel Garcia Marquez, Heart of Darkness, Jose Saramago, Love in the Time of Cholera, One Hundred Years of Solitude and Thomas Pynchon.

Troy Public Library has a subscription to Gale’s Literature Resource Center, MagillOnLiterature Plus, Scribner Writers Series, and Twaynes Authors Series, which you may connect with from any computer at Troy High or from your home, if you have Internet access and a library card (if you are at school you should not need a password). These databases contains biographies, bibliographies, overviews, and critical analyses. Select eResources from the TPL web page and then look at the Literature and Readinglink from the subject list (or connect directly from our Class Assignments page), and then choose the database you would like to use – I recommend you start with Literature Resource Center. You may also go to What Do I Read Next from either this site or our (THS media center) site. This resource helps you find books similar to those you have enjoyed or for which you need to find a basis of comparison but I don’t really like it. Maybe you will!! There is also an excellent Research Guide available here to help you formulate a thesis, organize your paper, or create a works cited page.
